SECTION A

Case Study

1. Read the case study of below and answer the questions that follow;

Annina Clays Limited has been in clay industry since early 1990s. The company has been making clay products using fine clay from Bweya swamp in Wakiso district.

It's products are highly demanded countrywide. The company has been able to open up branches in areas of Gulu, Kyenjojo, Kabale, Teso and other parts of Uganda. The company got experienced and skilled employees from one of the leading clay product producers. Using modern machines, the company produced quality clay products. It also went to an extent of lobbying for government support which boosted their capital base.

The manufactured floor and roof tiles, flower pots, charcoal stove and other products were furnished and painted under the supervision of experts who further trained company employees. The company products were outstanding and this gave them a competitive advantage.

During late 2000s, the company started experiencing a depletion of clay due to increased exploitation. This forced Annina Clays limited to shift it's production to Bombo town in Luwero district where clay was in abundance. However, customers and engineers started complaining of poor quality products. The tiles were too heavy and could break after a short time. This made the company to start losing the customers.

To ensure business continuity, the company started diversifying. It started making steel products like iron sheets and charcoal stoves whose raw materials would be got from abroad.

The managing director being an expert in financial management started using policies that could ensure the company's survival. He cut down remuneration costs, secured financial assistance from seed of Gold commercial bank, delayed payments among others.

The company experienced a high rate of staff turnover for better opportunities.
